

Need to Provide a Medical History?

This Online Tool Makes It Clear and Easy

When you apply for group insurance coverage through your employer, you might be asked to provide medical history details. The online process provided by Standard Insurance Company (The Standard) helps simplify what you need to do.

What is Evidence of Insurability?

A record of your past and current health events. We use it to verify whether we're able to offer you insurance coverage.

You'll start the Evidence of Insurability Review process. There you'll need to complete a Medical History statement. That's an online form asking a series of medical questions.

Tips and Instructions Before You Apply

1) Gather this information before you start:

- Online EOI link provided by your employer
- The types and amounts of coverage you're requesting for:

Additional Life & Dependent Life

- Medical history details, including health conditions, dates of diagnoses, treatments and medications
- Names and addresses of current and past physicians who provided treatment

2) Plan enough time — the form usually takes 10 to 30 minutes if you have all the information ready.

3) To protect your privacy, your session will end if it's inactive for 30 minutes. You can turn on your browser's "private" or "incognito" mode for even more protection.
